

The PEACOCK and CRANE.

AS the Peacock and Crane were disputing together,
One speedy in flight, t'other finer in feather;
The Peacock enrag'd, spread the fan in his tail,
Prithee tell, says the Crane, what thy pride does avail?

Tho'

Tho' children and fools
admire,
Are you better esteem'd attire?
So he left the poor P
flare,
While with proper con
the air.

MOR

Beauty and pride, w Betray the weakness of
" He handsome is, and
" Who handsome doe

REFLE

The man who his su
And seeks for science a
May represent the Crane
And all the foppery of The flutt'ring Peacock o
Is he that covets gaudy
Who, to dull earth con Hunts after infamy and